if it works with the a/c, then you can rule out the actual fan clutch and the valve on the firewall because its working. only time it doesnt work is when its running hot right? probably the temp switch on the engine. if et is saying the fan is on when it actually isnt, then check the wiring from the temp sensor to the ecm.

The difference between the two modules is the fan timing. The 8042103 will control the period of time the engine fan is on due to high air conditioning head pressure. The 8042105 will defer the fan timing to the engine ECM. The two cannot be interchanged without affecting the period of time the engine fan stays on. 5. I have a Peterbilt.
